Friends of Mason Con- fident He Will be Acquitted.

Swears it Was White Man Who Killed and Robbed Miss Morton.

Two Witnesses Met The Fellow Face to Face as He Ran Away From the Scene of His Horrible Crime.

Boston, Nov. 7.—Jos. Nemser, the second hand dealer, from whom the Morton and McPhee watches were recovered was rigorously examined today.

Nemser said this morning that the man who sold him the McPhee watch might have been an American. The description he gave would seem to tally with that of Mason.

Nemser was taken to the Cambridge jail that he might have a chance to see Mason and say whether or not Mason is the man who sold him either or both of the watches.

The colored men arrested last night as suspects in the Clara Morton case were released by the police today. They proved to the satisfaction of the officers that they had nothing to do with the crimes.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 7.—Elated by the day's developments the friends of Allen G. Mason, accused of the murder of Miss Clara Morton, claim that the case of the state is entirely broken down. They base this opinion on the discovery by the Boston police that the dead woman's watch was pawned by a negro. The state police who are handling the case against Mason say: "Wait, our case was never so strong as now."

The developments of the day in brief were as wired to the Advocate, first the finding of Miss Morton's watch in a West end pawn shop, where it had been sold by a negro for $4; second, the discovery that the watch of Miss McPhee, the girl murdered in Somerville, October 12, was sold in the same place October 14 by a white man, and third, the finding of a heavy file rasp in Beaver Park pond that may have been the weapon used by the murderer. The significance of this latter fact is that Park Superintendent Elder says he saw Mason coming from the pond soon after the murder.

The case is complicated by the fact that the Boston and state police are working at cross purposes. The Mason family, which is moving heaven and earth to clear the boy, is of course, rejoiced by this break.

Rumors as to this or that phase of the case are thick. One report has it that witnesses are being tampered with. This, however is not substantiated. Two Waverly witnesses, the only people living who saw the supposed murderer of Clara Morton on last Saturday night, enter a most emphatic and positive denial of the opinion of Chief Watts, who declares that Clara Morton was murdered by a negro. They are Horace Smith, a nurse in the McLean Asylum, and Miss Lizette Fowler, supervisor of nurses at McLean. They saw the man who murdered Miss Morton so near that the shadowy gleam of the street lamp lit his features.

Miss Fowler saw the blow struck, saw the man rob the victim and met the man almost face to face as he ran away from the moaning body, and she says the murderer was a white man.

Horace Smith was behind Miss Fowler and heard the blows struck. As he started toward the scene a man dashed past him. The electric lamp on the street below cast a faint light. Smith turned and looked at the man and saw him. He merely saw him rush by from the pond, and did not see him again. He is a white man. Regardless of the staunch opinion expressed by Chief Watts, these two witnesses, who were within 10 feet of the murderer when he ran away, declare themselves willing to state on their oath that he was not a colored man.

"The man I saw," said Mr. Smith, "was a white man. I don't care what is said. I haven't any interest in the case, but I do know this, that I declared a short time after the murder that the man who ran past me was a white man, and I say it now. I don't care how many people say a colored man was there, the man who ran past me was white."

Miss Fowler is as positive as Mr. Smith. She had more chance to be sure even, because when the blows were struck she saw them dealt and the man ran directly toward her.

"The first thing I heard," said Miss Fowler, "was the scuffle caused by the man's step on the walk."

"Almost immediately I heard two blows. I saw the man bending over the body as if stripping it. Then he jumped up and started to run toward me. When he saw me, about 10 or 12 feet away, he jumped to one side and ran still faster. I got a fairly good view of the man, and I can swear unhesitatingly that he was a white man."

Can Mr. Smith and Miss Fowler identify Mason as the man they saw? This question was flung put to both of them, and they were unwilling to swear to the identification. Mr. Smith had a chance to see Mason in Court, and he refused to swear that he was the man he saw that night.

"I do not wish to take that burden," said Mr. Smith. "I do not wish to positively identify any man as the one I saw. All I can say with truth is that the man I saw was a white man."

A reporter made a series of tests last night in the same place the murder was committed. The place is dark. At the first glance it would seem impossible to see many feet away, but there is an arc light at the bottom of the incline, just up from the entrance, and it is so placed that its rays loom around the bend of the path.

Were one to look down the path at a person coming up the path it might well be called impossible to distinguish whether a person was black or white. But reverse the position and look up the path from the position where Smith and Miss Fowler were standing there is not the same difficulty. The arc light sheds its rays a long distance up the path. The reporter found it quite possible for a person aided by the long rays of the light to distinguish the features of a man and tell whether he is white or black.

Smith and Miss Fowler claim to have been within 14 or 15 feet of the man as he rushed by, and their story seems quite plausible, judging from experiments.

If there was a colored man about the town that night, no one in Waverly seems to have seen him. By the testimony of train hands, storekeepers and street car conductors, no colored man came in or went out of Waverly by train or street car that night.

Mason boarded Conductor Brown's car at 10:25 p. m. From 8 to 10:25 no one in Waverly has said he saw Mason save Robert Elder. He merely saw him rush by from the pond, and did not see him again. He is a white man. Regardless of the staunch opin-

QUEER NOTION

Miss Teller Thinks She Has Power to Locate Gold, Silver, Oil Below
Earth's Surface.

Valparaiso, Ind., Nov. 7.—Miss Stella Josephine Teller, cousin of United States Senator Teller of Colorado and sister of a millionaire mine owner of Denver, who figured in a sensational escape from insane asylum physicians here a fortnight ago, gives a strange explanation of her troubles. She makes the claim that she has the power to locate gold, silver, oil, coal, or anything else in the ground, and was the person who located oil fields in Egypt and in Texas several years before the fields were open to the world.

Her plan, as she explained, is to have drawn for her a map of the tract of land on which the treasure is supposed to be. This she puts away for 24 hours.

At 9 o'clock in the morning she goes to her room and an invisible force takes possession of her and directs a pencil held in her hand to the places on the map where the coal, or gold, or minerals can be found.

Her claim is that she located a great deal of gold and silver and oil, and for her services she was to get one-fifth of the gross products.

Miss Teller gave the names of a number of men who were in partnership with her, among the number being the superintendent of the Stratton mine, at Cripple Creek. Her claim is that her brothers want her services, exclusively for themselves, and had her declared insane because she would not agree to it.

She was born in Canada and is the daughter of Colonel Upper of the British army. Her mother was a prominent society woman of Canada, and Miss Teller, before going to Denver, was well known in the fashionable world.

JEWELS GONE

New York, Nov. 7.—Ten thousand dollars worth of jewelry has mysteriously disappeared from the home of George H. Schofield and his son-in-law, Emanuel Jacobson, a lawyer, both of whom live at 132 Madison avenue. The robbery occurred while the family was at dinner last evening, but it was not until several hours later that the loss was known, and this morning the extent of the theft was first realized.

INDEPENDENT

Operators Agree to Accept the Awards of Commission in the Controversy.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Member Watkins of the anthracite coal strike commission, has telegraphed Recorder Wright from Scranton that the independent operators of the Wyoming and Lackawanna region have informed him of an agreement among themselves to become parties to the controversy and bind themselves to accept the awards of the commission. This piece of information will be received with much gratification by Colonel Wright.

RECEPTION

At United Brethren Church Thursday
Night—Mr. Swern Delivered
Address of Welcome.

About 200 people attended a reception given Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Bovey at the United Brethren church Thursday night. Mr. Bovey recently began his third year at the C. B. church. In the address of welcome Mr. H. O. Savara spoke feelingly of the good work Mr. Bovey has done in Newark and referred encouragingly to the rapid growth of the church. Mr. Bovey responded appropriately. Refreshments were served later in the evening.

Jake Smith Case.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 7.—An effort will soon be made to get "Hill Roaring" Jake Smith reinstated in the United States service. Smith was here to take with his attorney and had a long interview with Hanna.

EFFORT

To Wrest Stewart Millions
From the Hilton Heirs.

New York, Nov. 7.—Nearly a quarter of a century after the death of A. T. Stewart, another effort is to be made to wrest the Stewart millions from the Henry Hilton heirs, who inherited them. The new claimant is John Stewart, who came from Belfast, Ireland, with the claim that he is a third cousin of the late merchant.

Shaw's Order.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Secretary of the treasury Shaw returned to Washington from Iowa this morning and the first thing he did after consultation with Assistant Secretary Ailes, was to decide to accept no more state or municipal bonds as security for government deposits. He regards the emergency in the monetary situation as having passed and that there is no longer any necessity for taking any other than government bonds as collateral for deposits.

Carl Shurz Improves.

New York, Nov. 7.—Carl Schurz, who was taken suddenly ill at a banquet tendered Ambassador Andrew D. White, is somewhat better this morning.

Laura Biggar Gets Bail.

New York, Nov. 7.—Bail has been furnished for Laura Biggar, charged with conspiracy in connection with the Bennet will case. She surrendered voluntarily three days ago. No bail has yet been found for Dr. Hendricks and former Justice Stanton, who are held on the same charge.

DALZELL

Announces He is Candidate for Speaker of House.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Congressman Dalzell of Pennsylvania, has announced his candidacy for the speakership of the House, subject to the approval and support of the Pennsylvania delegation. Senator Quay says Pennsylvania will support Mr. Dalzell for speaker.

MAY LYNCHING.

Anniston, Ala., Nov. 7.—State troops have been ordered out here and are now assembling to prevent the lynching of a negro who assaulted Mrs. Williams. He is said to have been caught near here and a mob of 1,000 men are at the scene threatening to burn him.

SENATOR JONES' VIEW

National Democratic Chairman Not Discouraged by Tuesday's Elections—Gains Everywhere Except in Ohio, Where Dissensions Caused Mischief.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic national committee, ably made New York the fact that he was not discouraged by Tuesday's election as a clean Democratic victory, views the situation as promising from a Democratic standpoint. "I think the result presents a Democratic victory for 1904," he said. "All the vote shows that without division we can fight. The Ohio vote shows that with division we can accomplish nothing. The Ohio result illustrates the fact that it is necessary for the Democrats to stand together everywhere and if possible make nominations calculated to command the respect of all members of the party."

HARDWARE MEN

Will Hold Convention in Columbus in February—The Executive Committee Met Thursday.

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—The executive committee of the Ohio Hardware Dealers association met at the Chittenden Thursday. After the session it was announced that the next convention of the organization would be held in Columbus, in February.

The arrangements for the meeting, which is usually attended by several hundred prominent men, will be perfected by a committee consisting of Messrs. Albert Zettler, Charles A. Kraft, E. L. Harris, C. B. Burr, O. L. Davis and W. C. Jones of this city. They were present at the meeting with the committee, which is composed of President W. P. Bogardus of Mt. Vernon; financial secretary, W. G. Jones, Columbus; corresponding secretary, D. B. Burr, Piqua; C. W. Jewell, Utica; H. F. Rhea, Cleveland; M. B. Tallmadge, Mt. Gilead; J. P. Duffy, Greenville; and George M. Gray, Coshocton.

In addition to discussing arrangements for the coming gathering the committee talked at length about the new insurance association which the hardware organization has incorporated. Its chief purpose is to afford cheaper insurance for hardware men in Ohio, and other states eligible to membership. The insurance feature of the association promises to be a great success, the committeemen say. It was started recently.

BAKER RESIGNS

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 7.—Judge John H. Baker, of the U. S. district court today announced his resignation. This had been expected ever since his son, Francis E. was appointed Judge of the Circuit Court several months ago. He was in the peculiar position of having his decisions reviewed by his son, and there was much criticism to the fact that father and son held two positions of such importance. Judge Baker is close to the age of retirement.

COLD WAVE

With Temperature Near Zero Mark
Billed for Missouri Valley
Saturday.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The following special bulletin was issued by the weather bureau today: "The first well marked cold wave of the season will extend over the Upper Missouri Valley region tonight and Saturday, with a minimum temperature ranging from five to ten degrees above zero."

Safes Blown Open.

Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 7.—The safes in the Santa Fe railway station and Benjamin's jewelry store were blown last night and about $2,000 in money and jewelry secured. One of the thieves has been arrested and a portion of the plunder was found in his possession.

IT WAS CORNISH

Who Mailed the Poison Package Says Mrs. Stephenson.

A Dramatic Scene at The Trial of Roland B. Molineux.

Woman Prayed for Divine Guidance Before Saying That the Defendant Was Not the One Who Sent the Package—The Trial

New York, Nov. 7.—The greatest sensation in the second trial of Roland B. Molineux, charged with the murder of Mrs. Adams, came late yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. Hannah Stephenson, the wife of a Brooklyn policeman, was called to the stand by the defense, and testified positively that Molineux was not the man who mailed the now famous poison package at the general postoffice on the evening of December 23, 1898.

Then the witness, "to the best of her knowledge" identified Harry Cornish, who was asked to stand up in court, as the man whom she saw standing in front of her in the line at the postoffice and holding in his hand a package addressed to "Mr. Harry Cornish, Knickerbocker."

That was all she saw. Mrs. Stephenson said she attended the coroner's inquest and saw Molineux. She was sure he was not the man, and told her husband that she ought to make known her knowledge. He persuaded her that there was no occasion for her to mix up in the matter.

When the trial was on she went to offer her testimony, but was shut off by the decision of the lawyers to offer no defense. Then after Molineux's conviction she sent word of the evidence she had to give to General Molineux.

"Is that the man you saw with the package in the postoffice?" asked Governor Black, as Molineux stood up. "It is not," said Mrs. Stephenson, with added emphasis.

"Do you think you could recognize the man who mailed the package?" asked Mr. Osborne in resuming his cross-examination.

"I think I can."

"Do you say Cornish is that man?"

"I say he looks like him."

Cornish stood up at the invitation of the assistant district attorney and he and the witness regarded each other steadily.

"Is that the man?" Mr. Osborne said.

"It looks very much like him," Mrs. Stephenson replied.

"But is it?"

"To the best of my recollection it is."

Mrs. Stephenson said it was at the first trial that she first recognized Cornish as the man who mailed the package. She testified that there were three stamps on the package and the wrapper was put before her. It had five stamps on it and witness said she probably had noticed three of them which were in a straight line at the top and had overlooked two lower ones.

Replying to questions by the assistant district attorney, witness said she had been ill with nervous prostration and that she had read all the newspaper stories of the death of Mrs. Adams.

Witness was asked to read the wrapper, but said she could not, having left her reading glasses at home. She denied that her sanity was ever questioned. She said she had asked for divine instruction as to what to do in this case and had prayed.

On redirect examination she said she prayed every day for divine guidance. The question of the assistant attorney failed to show that an effort would be made to prove insanity or delusion under hysteria. It is also probable that an effort will be made to prove an alibi for Cornish.

The witness, under questions by the prosecution, said there were three stamps on the package, and when shown the wrapper with five stamps on it in two rows, said she might have overlooked the lower row. Mrs. Stephenson was on the stand when court adjourned for the day.

Other witnesses were handwriting experts, who all testified that Molineux did not write the address on the poison package. A clerk in a drug store testified that he had sold bromoseltzer to Cornish; also to Mrs. Rogers.

Miss Miller, the clerk in the store where the bottleholder was purchased, testified that she sold the holder late in the evening. Her evidence was corroborated by a man who was in the store at the time.

The prosecution has held that the holder was purchased early in the afternoon. She positively swore that the man who bought the holder was not Molineux.

TODAY'S TESTIMONY.

New York, Nov. 7.—The court room was packed today when Prosecutor Osborne said:

"Mrs. Stephenson I would like to ask you a question." The elderly lady who has introduced a new line of inquiry in this already intricate trial, took the stand.

"Did any young man come to you in court yesterday and point out a gentleman, telling you that he was Cornish?"

"No. I pointed Cornish out to my husband myself."

Mrs. Stephenson was excused and Herman Vulte was called. He said he was a professor in Columbia college. He was asked to tell of his connection with Molineux on the day that the poison package was mailed.

The witness told of meeting Molineux and going to the new university ground and visiting the several buildings with Molineux fixing the time at 1:45 p. m. Columbia college is seven miles from the postoffice. He was excused with only one question by Osborne.

A postoffice employee named Lockwood was called by the defense to show what side of the postoffice the package was mailed. He said there was nothing on the package to show between what hours the package was mailed except that it was posted on December 23, 1898.

Harry E. Howell, an employee of Hartgen's store in Newark, where the bottleholder was purchased, was called to the stand to deny Eugene Erhart's testimony that he had wrapped up the package. Howells said that wrapping up packages was not Erhart's duties. Witness said that no one in the store ever heard Erhart say he had wrapped up the bottleholder until he testified in court.

A man named Adams today testified that he heard Mrs. Stephenson's husband say to his wife in court yesterday "That's Cornish", and that she replied "Is it?" After Adams' identification of Stephenson Osborne said: "Prosecution rests."

Mrs. Stephenson then took the stand.

Protection And Prosperity For The Trusts Only.

The tin plate trust, an infant industry that is enjoying high protection, has allowed its men to go to work again.

Months ago the trusts asked its employees to accept a reduction of 25 per cent in their wages so that it could secure a large contract from the Standard Oil company that it alleged would otherwise be given to the Welsh manufacturers. The men refused and the trust promptly closed down all its plants. After a long period of such coercion the men agreed to accept a reduction of 3 per cent and now they have been permitted to go to work on that basis.

The tin plate trust has been charging high prices. It could afford to cut them to get a big contract, but no trust ever thinks of lessening its gains. The loss, if there is any, must fall on the men. It has in this case. They have been forced into months of idleness and are permitted to resume work at least at lower wages.

The working man who is getting no higher wages than he did two or three years ago, but is paying 40 per cent more for the necessities of life, and the working man who is locked out for months and forced to accept a reduction in pay are sure to find out sooner or later that high protection is not designed to protect labor. They will find out, too, that prosperity exists for the trusts, and that labor is only getting the crumbs that fall from the rich man's tables.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE A REAL PERIL.

The spread of bubonic plague in California is increasing and causing considerable alarm. The health boards of the country in conference at New Haven have urged the government to adopt prompt measures to stamp out the disease completely. The number of cases in California is increasing rapidly. Since February there have been 2,230 deaths from the plague in San Francisco, every case reported having proved fatal.

The plague was brought to San Francisco from the Philippines on Government transports. The public health and marine hospital service describe the disease as being more than ever dangerous in the United States because of our rapid means of transit and the habit of Americans to travel. It is said that in business men of San Francisco have used their influence to keep the health authorities from publishing the facts in regard to the cases that have occurred, and have in this way aided in the spread of the disease. It is now believed that the time has come for the general government to act. It is astonishing that this condition of affairs could have existed in San Francisco without creating alarm throughout the country; but the fact is that little is known of the plague in this country. The reports of its ravages in India and other parts of the East are far distant, and create no alarm in the United States, supposed to be isolated. The facts are that it is a very contagious and most deadly disease. In the Philippines and in China the death rate has reached 75 per cent, which mortality is much greater than that of the most frightful battles in the history of the world.

TOO MUCH JOHNSON SWAMPED DEMOCRACY.

(Columbus Citizen.)

This is the story of an alleged statesman who dreamed he was a man of destiny but awoke to discover that nature had designed him for a chaser of rainbows rather than for a leader of men.

Immediately after his election as temporary chairman of the Sandusky convention by a mere scratch in the state central committee, Tom L. Johnson pompously announced that he would "control" the convention. He put up as assets to make good his right to exercise this responsibility, one automobile and one circus tent, and as no other person desirous of controlling the convention appeared with such credentials as these, Mr. Johnson was given the job by common consent.

It should not be understood for a moment, however, that Mr. Johnson at the Sandusky convention exercised any real leadership over the delegates. The latter were in a good natured mood and willing to let him "run things" so long as they had nothing to ask for themselves, but on any fighting proposition the convention was entirely beyond his control. This was evidenced in the nomination of Philip H. Bruck for dairy and food commissioner against the Johnson opposition by a majority of 68 votes. The delegates simply gave Mr. Johnson all the rope he wanted until they thought he had enough. Then they brought him up with a jerk. Any six good men, taking hold of affairs at Sandusky the Sunday previous to the convention, could have altogether eliminated the mayor of Cleveland as an element in it.

Mr. Johnson began his career of political suicide in his "keynote" by departing from the printed text to attack Democratic leaders of Ohio who for some reason or another had incurred his personal displeasure, and by repudiating the very platform which he had just caused to be adopted. By the time he had concluded he had done the Democracy of the state more injury than he could atone for in the entire campaign.

Mr. Johnson announced at Sandusky that the campaign would be opened with the tent, the red devil and the Rev. Mr. Bigelow at Lorain. The state committee did not announce it. Johnson announced it. At that moment he assumed to be the state ticket, the state committee and the whole party, and he continued in this assumption until Tuesday's catastrophe. Accordingly the campaign was opened at Lorain, but Mr. Johnson did not have the courtesy to invite thither any of the candidates on the state ticket, with the exception of Mr. Bigelow, nor any of the Democratic leaders of the state. He appeared to feel confident that his own presence was sufficient to open anything from a jackpot to a cloudburst, and that nothing further was necessary to make the occasion a howling success. The other candidates did go to Lorain as a matter of self-preservation, each supposing that the failure to receive an invitation had been due to an oversight or accident; but when they arrived on the ground and compared notes each found that the others had fared no better than himself. No Democratic leaders were present because none had been invited. It was a campaign opening of one man, by one man and for one man, and that man was Tom L. Johnson.

In the meantime Mr. Johnson's state executive committee was meeting in Columbus and assessing Mr. Bigelow's associates on the state ticket $1000 each for the blessed privilege of being hoodwinked by Mr. Johnson. For some unknown reason Mr. Bigelow was not assessed. It is understood that Mr. Johnson bore the expense of the Bigelow campaign, but this did not extend to the payment in his behalf of the assessment levied on other candidates by the state committee. Subsequently Mr. Johnson wrote insulting letters to the other candidates on the state ticket, whining like a baby about the amount of money he was spending in the campaign for his own benefit, and impudently demanding that the $1000 in the case of each candidate should be paid immediately. The letters came from Johnson, not the state committee.

So the campaign of a single star performer went on. In his speeches Mr. Bigelow never mentioned the Democratic party, and Mr. Johnson named it only to condemn it. He advertised himself as a reformer, but was not alluded to in the platform and that have never been and never will be regarded as a part of Democratic doctrine. He favored single tax, government ownership and everything except fundamental Democratic principles. He resorted to the vaudeville expedient of hiring men to follow him about and ask questions in order that he might work off his "brilliant" and readymade replies. This cheap trick fooled some people, but it disgusted thousands of Democrats, who could not be hoodwinked by it and who were forced, by their sense of honor, to resent it at the polls as a disgrace to a Democratic campaign. More notable than any other feature of his canvass, however, was Mr. Johnson's continual ignoring of the sins of Republicans in order to make his antipathy toward certain Democrats more prominent. He paid more attention to the eight Democrats who voted for the Curative act than to all the Republicans who conceived and enacted that legislation. From listening to one of his speeches one would suppose that the real issues of the campaign were raised by Democrats and not by Republicans. He continually put his own party on the defensive and by inference left the opposition in the stronger position.

Mr. Johnson came to Columbus and in a speech never rivalled for incongruities and bad taste in this city proceeded to range one Democratic faction against another. He placed himself squarely in line with the local Democratic destructionists, who number about one-thousandth part of the city and county Democracy. He even gave advice as to what alleged Democratic news paper of this city Democrats should read, notwithstanding two other local Democratic papers—one English and one German—were loyally supporting the ticket which he seemed determined to destroy. His statements of economic conditions were so wide of the facts that John H. Clark, who had preceded him and whom he had invited to be present, was obliged to correct him from the platform. The meeting was the most miserable political travesty ever put on the boards in this city, lost hundreds of votes to the Democratic county ticket and disgusted and disheartened those Democrats who still had enough partisan-ship left to vote the ticket in spite of Mr. Johnson.

From Columbus the automobile president-elect went to Cincinnati. Here he announced that he "despised" John R. McLean. He opened a war on the Democratic county committee, just as he had done in other counties. Of course, Mr. Johnson had a right to "despise" Mr. McLean and most people will readily understand that while he may not be taken seriously enough to inspire a similar feeling on Mr. McLean's part, the latter, when not too busy with other things, finds time to regard Mr. Johnson with mild contempt. But why Mr. Johnson should burden the Democratic party and ticket with his personal likes and dislikes is a matter that he has never attempted to explain.

After this manner the Johnson campaign proceeded, from the day of blundering at Sandusky to the day of reckoning at the polls. Mr. Johnson assumed no responsibility as a candidate himself, except that at the convention he had the brazen impudence to distribute badges bearing the legend, "Tom L. Johnson, 1901." Of course, the inference was that those who voted for Bigelow today were bound to vote for Johnson for President tomorrow, and in the meantime, if he wanted to be governor or senator, no Democrat was expected to object.

Mr. Johnson has met with some success in Cuyahoga county, where Republican and Democratic opposition to Mark Hanna has been of singular advantage to him. He has with characteristic vanity interpreted this anti-Hanna sentiment as a pro-Johnson sentiment, and circumstances have permitted him to reap the benefit of the doubt, where doubt existed. That he is not large enough to spread himself over the state under any pretext, however, is now evidenced by the public repudiation of his leadership by 50,000 plurality in Ohio, when only 800,000 votes were cast in the state. If the vote had been normal, if 200,000 voters had not remained away from the polls, the red automobile would have been buried under an avalanche of 150,000 plurality.

It is not too late to repair the Democratic wreck left by the election. It is not too late to be done by permitting a repetition of the mistakes of the present. The Democracy can recover itself and yet win victories in the state and nation. To place the party in a position that will enable it to do this should now be the object of all Democrats.

The Fisher Circular.

The Standard believes in temperance and temperance organizations, but when one of these latter societies is guilty of such despicable methods as that which characterized the Anti-Saloon League in the closing hours of the late campaign, then it is time for decent people to repudiate it. This organization, as it has done before in at least one other county, when a Republican candidate was made to suffer, waited until the very last hour, and then, like a thief in the night, issued its circular against Mr. Fitzgibbon, the Democratic candidate for prosecuting attorney. It is not a question of the truth of the charges made, as they possibly all true, but it is the late hour in which they were made, with no time given for refutation before election, which stamps it as the act of a cowardly sandbagger. The Standard worked for the defeat of Mr. Fitzgibbon and the election of Mr. Randolph, but the work was done honestly and above board, and we refuse to believe that the act of the Anti-Saloon League is countenanced by Republicans.—Pittsburgh Standard.

The Standard has made but one mistake in the above article. As the charges made in the circular were not true the Standard should have said so. Then it would have told the whole truth.

The Montefiore Family.
The late Sir Moses Montefiore, the "grand old man" of the Jews, the modern Moses bringing thousands and tens of thousands out of bondage and poverty into the land of peace and plenty, and really he had his reward, rounding out his century in fine shape, his spiritual eye not dimmed nor his natural strength abated—was once taunted with being a descendant of the murderers of Christ. He said nothing at the time, but called on his accusers next day with a chart of his pedigree, showing that the home of his forebears, the "old homestead," had been in Spain for over 2,000 years, about 200 years before Christ was born.—New York Press.

Wasn't Looking For That Rat.
Superintendent of the Railroad Company—So you want a job as fireman, eh?

Applicant—Yes, sir.
Superintendent—I'll have to ask you a few questions. How far is it to the north pole?

Applicant—Gee whiz! If you're going to put me on that line, I don't want the job.—Indianapolis News.

No Cash.
"Harry, I suppose you keep a cash account?"
"No, Uncle George, I haven't got so far as that, but I keep an expense account."—Boston Transcript.

To preserve health is a moral and religious duty, for health is the basis of all social virtues. We can no longer be useful when not well.—Johnson.

Grove's Black Root Liver Pills.
Made from an active principle obtained from Black Root. It acts on the liver, cleans the blood and builds up the system. No opiates, no sickening, no ill effects. No habit, no side effects. Will cure chronic constipation. Price 25c each.

"That's the kind for me."—Oliver.

The dainty dish,
not the soggy mush,
if it's H-O.

You will never know just how good H-O is by eating any other oatmeal. The qualities which make H-O palatable are not found in other kinds. We have to charge fifteen cents a package to make H-O as good as it is, and we could not make it any better if we charged a dollar.

Man's Influence.
The only responsibility that a man cannot evade in this life is the one he thinks of least, his personal influence. Man's conscious influence when he is on dress parade, when he is posing to impress those around him, is woefully small, but his unconscious influence, the silent, subtle radiation of his personality, the effect of his words and acts, the trifles he never considers, is tremendous. Every moment of life he is changing to a degree the life of the whole world. Every man has an atmosphere which is affecting every other. So silently and unconsciously is this influence working that man may forget that it exists.—W. G. Jordan.

Material For a Whole Chapter.
"Have you—aw—ever thought what you would do," asked the literary forger as his cable train entered the tunnel, "if this structure should cave in when you were about half way through?"
"Often," replied the Chicago man.
"I should demand the return of my nickel."
And the literary forger made a memorandum in his notebook. He had discovered another interesting peculiarity in Americans.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A German Custom.
In some parts of Germany the girls have a pretty custom in which the queen of flowers plays a part. If a girl has several suitors and wishes to know which of them would be true to her, she takes rose petals and drops them into a bowl of water, giving each the name of one of her admirers. The leaf that remains floating longest represents the man whose faithfulness she may rely on and whom she would therefore do well to choose.

A Prejudiced Opinion.
"Is it true that men of genius do not know the value of money?"
"I'm afraid it is," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "Most men of genius see so little of it that they never have a chance to form any definite ideas on the subject."—Washington Star.

FIXED EXPENSES

Every retail merchant must have a store as well as a stock and pay rent or its equivalent. He must buy heat, light, service, transportation, postage—in fact, a host of things. He cannot get along without them. They are sometimes called the "fixed charges" of the business. But having all those expenses does not bring business.

The one thing needed is publicity—that people should know him and that he has something which they need or want.

If the expenses are 10 per cent without advertising, make them 12 or 14 per cent with advertising and double or quadruple the business.—Men's Outfitter.

THE RAILWAYS

NEW YORK CENTRAL HAS NOT BOUGHT THE D. & H.

New Device Tried on the Santa Fe Road—Local and General Railway Notes and Personals.

New York, Nov. 7.—President R. M. Olyphant of the Delaware and Hudson company today authorized an emphatic denial of the report from Scranton in reference to the alleged sale of the Delaware and Hudson properties to the New York Central.

Prizes Will be Awarded.

As the annual inspection of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh has been declared off on account of the heavy traffic, Supt. C. M. Bennett of the Cincinnati and Muskingum Valley, Supt. M. W. Mansfield of the Indianapolis and Vincennes and Asst. Engineer Ericson have been appointed a committee to go over the lines and award the annual prizes. The party started on its trip last Tuesday.

B. & O. Better Service.

Broad vestibuled coaches, smokers excepted, will shortly be placed in service on B. & O. trains Nos. 103, 104, 105 and 106, comprising the company's Pittsburgh-Cincinnati service in Columbus. The combined mail and smoking cars in use on trains Nos. 103 and 104 are to be taken off and separate mail and smoking cars supplied in lieu thereof. This will bring these trains up to six cars. Travel is increasing because of many reasons, some of which are directly due to the company's efforts, while others owe their origin to the needs of an increasing population.—Columbus Citizen.

For Terminal Superintendent.

Advices from Pittsburgh indicate that the proposition to appoint a terminal superintendent for Columbus, to have charge of all Pennsylvania terminals here, is meeting with favor. Indeed, it seems to have been tacitly agreed upon. One of the Pittsburgh papers goes so far as to mention January 1 as the date of the appointment. While no advices have been received locally those best informed consider that Mr. Runyan, the present trainmaster, is the logical selection. His worth as a trainmaster is undisputed and his experience in Columbus gives him a peculiar knowledge of the local field.—Columbus Citizen.

Transmitting Train Orders.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railway has recently adopted a new device for transmitting train orders to locomotive engineers or conductors at telegraph stations without reducing speed of the train. It is the invention of a retired locomotive engineer, formerly employed on that line, and by its use it will be possible for the trainmaster controlling the movement of trains to communicate orders to the engineer or conductor at any telegraph station on the line without necessity of flagging the train and thereby losing much time in "slowing down" and getting under way again. The device is somewhat similar to that used on fast mail trains for picking up mail at small stations where trains do not stop.—Ohio State Journal.

Local Railway Notes.

Just as Baltimore and Ohio train No. 89 was pulling out of the yards at 7:30 o'clock last evening two cars jumped the track at the east end of the bridge, delaying the train for some little time.

ADVERTISING

One Thing at a Time

"I can't afford to advertise on a large scale," said a merchant lately, "and with my varied stock I wouldn't know where to begin on a small scale."

It is a common fallacy that the advertising must cover the whole stock.

In point of fact it never does, even with the most lavish advertisers, and, if it did, the result would be a jumble of prolixity. The true policy is to select one article at a time—something moderately priced and meeting the want of the day—and push that at the people.—Philadelphia Record.

collar and plaited silk gimp introduced in a double series of vandykes on the narrow basque and cuffs.

The new furs are very rich. Many of them come shaped on the shoulders so as to form a cape, and from there they fall almost to the feet in the shape of flat tabs edged with tails. Sometimes the back of the neck is softened with brown chiffon. The cuffs are large and pliable, the tails trimming them so arranged that whichever way the muff is held they fall into place.

The gray squirrel is one of the most fashionable furs of the moment. It is made into loose sack back paletots, while the pelmine and cape combined is the newest form of fur garment.

A great many odd and even inexpensive furs are made up after the fashion of costlier skins.

One of the latest fur models is shown in the cut. It is of squirrel, with revers of point lace over plush velvet. The hat is of lace and chiffon to match.

Bodies are so diverse in fashion that a clever dressmaker is able to suit the most exacting figures and arrange trimmings in the most becoming fashion. ing blouse is still fashionable, but although the material may differ the coloring must correspond.

Black blouses of every description are worn with black skirts, and the pin spotted nets, crepe de chimes, mouseline de soie and plain and fancy chiffon are much incrustured with lace or decorated with embroidery. Fine jet is much used, and silk featherstitching is quite a popular decoration.

Cross stitching and the varied types of herringbone and feather work are arranged over narrow ribbon velvet. Spots of velvet are also used. These are generally of varying size.

The evening waist in the picture is of lace, Nile green lily satin and chiffon.

THE USE OF SOFT COAL

Extent of Demand For It Since the Strike.

BETTER FIRING FACILITIES KNOWN

Some Dealers in Bituminous Regard Gain of This Fuel as a Permanent Thing—Will Be Advanced in Price Next Year—Factors in Coal Transportation.

One of the interesting results of the coal strike will be the effect on the demand for and price of soft coal. Each previous strike has shown a slight permanent gain for soft coal in the amount used for domestic and steam purposes. It is less subject to change, less "touchy," than anthracite. It is not in the hands of so few men. The wholesale handlers of soft coal in New York city agree in thinking that the strike just past marks one more advance which will be held. One reason is that means for mixing anthracite and bituminous in such a way that little or no smoke results are constantly being improved. The mixture for ordinary grades of soft coal is two and a half to three of anthracite to one of bituminous. Better facilities of firing are also being found out, and, lastly, various devices are being worked out for consuming smoke. The result of it all is that dealers think that any enforcement of the smoke ordinance will have little or no effect on the demand for soft coal.

A striking proof that the dealers regard this gain of soft coal as a permanent thing is the fact, learned by a New York Tribune reporter the other day, that the wholesalers are quietly arranging a fixed price for next year, which will be greatly in advance of any former normal price. It is to be placed between $3 and $3.25 "on board," as the technical term of delivery is. Certain of the steam carrying lines have already agreed on $3.50 "alongside" as next year's price.

At present there is practically no soft coal coming to market, as the roads are devoting themselves to anthracite. The supply of bituminous is large, and the people are ready to take it, but the transportation facilities from Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania are poor. There are two factors in coal transportation at this time—a lack of motive power, there being an insufficient number of locomotives on many of the roads, and a dearth of cars to handle the supply. The lack of motive power delays the coal in arriving, but does not affect the amount of final delivery. The lack of freight cars limits the total amount of delivery. The lack of motive power is the great problem at present for the railroads. The Baltimore and Ohio has recently placed an order for 200 locomotives. The uniform rate for renting "foreign" freight cars, that is, cars belonging to a rival line, is 20 cents a day. This precludes one company getting much assistance from another. The Central Railroad of New Jersey has many cars lying idle in its yards, but other companies are not attempting to make use of them.

The situation the other day then was plenty of bituminous, but no adequate facilities for transporting it, and little or no anthracite to be brought in, because the week beginning Oct. 26 had been and continued to be equivalent to a strike week, owing to John Mitchell day and a holiday among the Poles.

The price of soft coal wholesale is from $3 and $3.25 up to almost $5.50. This is rather high, but it is expected that it will remain steady for some time to come.

The theoretical price of anthracite is $6.50 retail, the wholesale price of $5 holding for the present. But for a person not a regular customer to obtain immediate delivery of anthracite $7.50 was required. Even at that little or no coal was obtainable.

The sales agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey said that there would be an abundance of anthracite by Nov. 15. The steamship Sarpodon brought 4,500 tons of Welsh coal recently from Cardiff.

All the coal being rushed in from the Pennsylvania mines is for domestic use. The delivery of coal for steam purposes is not being attempted as yet.

THE "LORD KITCHENER."

Latest Shoulder For Modish Winter Coats For Women.

Among the admirable new cloth coats is an especially smart affair named in honor of the recently decorated war lord who distinguished himself in the south of Africa.

To make it plain, the intention of the Lord Kitcheners is to add to the width of feminine shoulders, says the Philadelphia Record. We are still bent upon appearing broad. In this instance this modish effect is gained by simply carrying the sleeve up on to the shoulder in strap effect. It is really very simple, this lengthening of a small portion of the top of the sleeve and carrying it up on to the shoulder, and since the sleeve holds itself out the shoulder line is made at least two inches longer. This is quite different, you see, from the raglan sleeves, which hug down about the shoulder and give a slender person a meanness that is fairly woe-borne in effect.

A Move to Protect the Elk.

The demand for elk teeth has become so great within recent years on the part of the members of the R. F. O. E. that the sportsmen of the west, according to a St. Paul dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer, are preparing an appeal to President Roosevelt that he recommend in his forthcoming message to Congress some protection for the antlered herds.

"That," remarked the young trout, "I conclude, is a fly."

"Yes," returned his more experienced companion, "but it's advisable not to jump at conclusions."—Philadelphia Record.

THE THANKSGIVING TABLE.

Some Hints For Decorating the Festive Board.

A charming centerpiece for the Thanksgiving table seen last year was a mound of fruit arranged on a small silver tray that, resting on silver feet, was elevated an inch or more from the cloth, says Harper's Bazar. A wreath of autumn leaves encircled the tray, and the fruit was artistically arranged with the leaves and drooping wisps of bearded grain. A rustic basket of any sort or an Indian canoe—either one is a pretty holder for the centerpiece of fruit. A large horn of plenty is frequently used or smaller ones arranged at the corners of the table, with flowers and fruit filling them. The Thanksgiving table, as a rule, is apt to be a very hospitable board and of a generous length, which will absorb a good deal of decoration. One effective design had the centerpiece of fruit and, at either end of the table a sheaf of wheat nearly two feet high, with a cluster of rich American Beauty roses rising out of the center of each sheaf. On a smaller table this decoration may be used alone as a centerpiece. The combination of the hothouse and modern flower with the wheat, representing the very necessity of life, seems a little incongruous in suggestion. Actually, however, the gold of the grain and the rich color of the rose form a most attractive combination.

If one has access to country fields in November, the glowing red berries and vines and branches of gorgeous hues that may then be had offer most artistic material. The downy thistle balls plucked at the right time are effective mixed with autumn vines and berries.

It should not be forgotten that autumn leaves may be gathered at the moment of their greatest beauty in early November and beautifully preserved by being dipped lightly in a weak gum arabic water. When dry, they should be kept in boxes, carefully and lightly packed, as the treatment makes them very brittle. By this method, however, their colors are preserved, and they may be used repeatedly.

WATKINS' MORAL COURAGE.

Story Told of a Member of the Coal Strike Commission.

The following story about Thomas H. Watkins, a member of the anthracite strike commission, illustrating his stern acknowledgment of duty, is told with glee by his friends. Nearly twenty years ago, when he was manager of a store connected with the Hancock colliery, one of the mine employees was attacked with smallpox, says a Scranton special to the Philadelphia Press. The man was placed in an isolated dwelling and a quarantine was declared, but, despite the official orders, some of the patient's friends insisted upon visiting him. One of these, a big fellow, went into the house with an air of bravado, and no one seemed to have enough authority to stop him.

It was then that Mr. Watkins, emerging from the store, marched after the offender in a determined way which those who knew the young man recognized as meaning business. Without a word he followed into the plague stricken house, grasped the visitor by the collar, hustled him out and took him several miles to the lockup. He did not take the smallpox, and he did effectually establish a quarantine at the risk of his own life. It was not his personal duty, but he realized the danger to the community from the laxity of discipline and assumed the responsibility.

It is with this sort of moral courage that he has gone on through the years doing the duty that seemed to his conscience to be laid upon him. It has especially equipped him for valuable service on the anthracite commission.

TRIGGS' GREAT IDEA.

Chicago Professor Proposes to Establish School For Novelists.

Plans for a school for ambitious novelists were outlined by Professor Oscar L. Triggs of Chicago the other day, says the New York World.

"There would be several departments in this school," said Professor Triggs; "each department to be conducted by specialists. These departments would comprise poetry, prose, criticism, journalism and publication. Every detail of literature and the making of a novel would be specialized. There would be special instructors for the development of plot, experienced instructors in love scenes and for the benefit of the historical novelist there would be special instruction in fencing."

"The first three books brought out by an author represent merely apprentice work, and they should be destroyed in the school."

Professor Triggs deplored the epidemic of bad literature and extended his sympathy to the long suffering public.

No Football For Mutes.

Owing to bazing at Kendall Green the faculty has declared that there will be no more football played by the college team this fall, says a Washington special to the New York Times. Kendall Green is the government college for mutes, and it has for years maintained a crack football team and won many victories. The mutes have of late been playing all sorts of pranks, to the severe annoyance of the faculty. Hundreds of chairs were taken out of the chapel recently and hidden. A dictionary was substituted for the Bible, the electric lights were tampered with so that prayers had to be conducted in the darkness, which rather took the force out of the exercises, which are conducted on the fingers in the sign language. The football team has been ordered to cancel seven or eight games with the teams of neighboring institutions.

Death From Diphtheria.

James Thomas Glenn, son of Mr. James A. Glenn, died at his home in the Sharon Valley, five miles north of the city, on Thursday afternoon, after a brief illness of diphtheria, aged 11 years and 11 months. The funeral took place Friday afternoon at one o'clock, the services being conducted by Rev. B. F. Patt, pastor of the Fifth street Baptist church, this city, and the interment was made in Cedar Hill cemetery.

REDUCED AREA

IS SOWN FOR THE WHEAT HAR-VEST OF 1903.

Big Potato Crop This Year—Statistics
Furnished in the State Crop Report.

The state crop report issued from the office of the secretary of the state board of agriculture Thursday is one of the most important of the year. It shows that the area for the wheat harvest of 1903 is considerably less than that harvested this year but that the growing plant though sown late is in fair condition. The potato crop seems to be good, averaging well up to 100 bushels per acre.

The report says:
Wheat seeding was very greatly prolonged by reason of unfavorable weather conditions. The great bulk of the wheat was late sown, but this may result in good by avoiding somewhat the ravages of fly. The area seeded is not up to a full average but compares quite favorably with amount seeded last year. The plant that is up shows a good catch and vigorous healthy growth, giving promise of being much better prepared for going into winter than was the crop of last year at this time.

The area of rye will be large, although not equal to the abnormally large area seeded last fall. Winter barley shows about an average area.

The corn prospect is estimated at 87 per cent. of an average. The area is about the same as last year, and until the unfavorable weather in September there was prospect of a large crop of excellent corn, but conditions have been such that a great deal of the crop did not properly mature, and the husking shows that the corn must be carefully sorted for cribbing, there being much that is soft and unmerchantable while some has the extent of being almost worthless for feed.

Clover seed is a very short crop, in many localities it is a failure on account of the midget in the head, and was mostly cut for hay.

The area of potatoes is not quite equal to the area of last year, but the product per acre, and the total product show a decided increase as compared with last year. The average increase is about twenty bushels per acre. Considerable rot is reported but few counties being exempt. In some of the heaviest potato growing counties, damage from this cause is great.

Except hogs, that are in many localities affected by cholera, live stock shows a generally healthy condition. Hogs are marketed as early as possible and the number remaining on hand to be fattened is less than last year.

The statistical portion of the report is as follows:

Wheat—Area sown last fall as returned by township assessors, 2,234,225 acres; sown this fall compared with last year, 93 per cent; estimated area seeded for the harvest of 1903, 2,082,846 acres; condition compared with an average, 88 per cent; average date of seeding, October 2.

Winter Barley—Acreage sown compared with last year, 91 per cent; condition compared with an average, 86 per cent.

Rye—Acreage sown compared with last year, 82 per cent; condition compared with an average, 89 per cent.

Corn—Prospect compared with an average 83 per cent.

Buckwheat—Prospect compared with an average, 66 per cent.

Clover Seed—Prospect compared with an average, 66 per cent.

Potatoes—Area planted as estimated

INSURANCE

Claim Develops a Queer Situation in Missouri—Company Will Resist the Payment.

Carthage, Mo., Nov. 7.—Can a beneficiary who, acting in self defense, takes the life of the insured, receive the insurance?

A legal question having no parallel in Missouri law decisions has grown out of the tragedy in this city, late last week, in which Mrs. Dorinda Randall shot and killed her husband, R. O. Randall, as he approached her with an open knife. Randall carried life insurance to the amount of $1,000. His wife was named as the beneficiary of the policy. She now seeks to recover the amount of the policy, but there is a probability that the company will refuse to recognize the claim because the beneficiary killed the insured.

Mrs. Randall and her brother-in-law, Dan W. Keltner, went to the law office of T. C. Tadlock in this city last Friday. Tadlock being Mrs. Randall's attorney in a suit she had filed for divorce. While she was there Randall entered and sprang at her with an open knife. Mrs. Randall, who had feared such an assault, was prepared and opened fire, emptying a revolver and Keltner also fired two shots, but the bullets from the woman's revolver proved fatal. At the coroner's inquest Mrs. Randall was exonerated.

It is of course impossible accurately to gauge the part the small "want ad." plays in the life of today, but it is a well known fact that thousands depend upon it for employment.

Rich Man's Plan to Relieve Distress.

William J. Smith is one of the richest men in Greenwich, Conn. When the coal strike was in progress, he feared that many persons would suffer this winter. He accordingly purchased several hundred acres of woodland in the northern part of the town and offered employment to all who desired it, says the New York World. A hundred men have accepted his offer. They will fell trees and cut them to a mill erected near by. Mr. Smith will supply them with wood for fuel also and will see that all poor families have fuel free.

"FANTASTICALS."

How Some City Children Make Merry on Thanksgiving Day.

In many of the large cities of the United States the so called "phantom" or "fantastical" is becoming quite a feature of Thanksgiving. From early morning till late at night children dressed in grotesque costumes and wearing false faces parade the streets, making loud and discordant noises with some nonsensical instrument. Although the origin of the custom is veiled in obscurity, it is claimed that it is a survival of the custom of Guy Fawkes day, which is celebrated in England on Nov. 5.

Wherever the juvenies celebrate Thanksgiving day in this manner doorbells work overtime, and the children of the rich take part in the fun and seem to enjoy it as much as the children of the poor. They have a code of etiquette altogether their own. A child should wear a mask of some sort, the more horrible or grotesque the better. In default of this the face should be painted in circus style until it is unrecognizable. Boys should dress in women's as well as men's clothes so as to make the two styles about equal in number. Ugliness and not beauty must mark the female apparel worn on the occasion.

Each parader should have a tin horn or a "peeler's whistle." A devil's rattle consisting of dried boards or cigar box tops is always popular, and a rooster call made with a tomato can or a mustard box and a rosin string is greatly admired. Last year megaphones made a highly successful appearance. Drums and trumpets are scorned upon as the insignia of very small "kids." While girls are allowed to parade, to wear masks and blow horns, they must not wear boys' clothes. If a venturesome maid presume to don her brother's suit and go upon the street, woe betide her. She is sure to have her hair pulled down and her jacket torn off.

Quite a little money is collected by the children, and any urban refusing to divide his booty is bound to be mobbed and robbed by his cronies. The successful beggar, however, has the right to determine how the cash shall be invested, whether in candy, cake, chestnuts, pie or frankfurters.

MONUMENT TO PARNELL.

Colossal Structure by St. Gaudens to Be Huge Pyramid.

John E. Redmond recently gave out a statement concerning progress made on the proposed Parnell monument, says the New York Herald. He said: "Mr. Augustus St. Gaudens has been engaged upon the model of the monument for nearly two years and it is now complete."

"In a letter addressed to Mr. Redmond Mr. St. Gaudens says: 'After a great deal of time and study devoted to which form the monument should take I have concluded that it should be a pyramid of forty or fifty feet in height, composed of green Connemara marble, with a colossal statue of Parnell at the base in front, in the act of speaking by a table, over which is thrown a large Irish flag.'

"This pyramid is to represent Ireland. The four sides will contain symbols cut into the marble in gold, expressive of the four provinces of Ireland. Around the base of the pyramid the names of the fifty-two counties will be inserted. My idea in designing this monument has been that it should be simple, impressive and austere, in keeping with the character of the Irish cause as well as of Parnell."

"The figure of Parnell will, of course, be in bronze. In accordance with my contract I am bound to deliver the monument complete in Dublin within three years from this date. The cost of the monument will be $50,000."

Mr. Redmond is highly satisfied with the model of the monument, which he has taken with him back to Ireland. It will be the greatest monument in the Irish capital.

The Thanksgiving Turkey.

How often I think of the dinners I relished
When I was a youngster, far back on the farm;
How often, by time and by distance emboldened
The thoughts of those dinners my memory charm!
But Thanksgiving dinner, the best of all dinners,
Whose sumptuous bounty I sadly recall,
Embraces every good thing for saints and for sinners
The Thanksgiving turkey the best of them all.
The Thanksgiving turkey, the fat, juicy turkey,
The well seasoned turkey was best of them all.

The possum was sweet; the potatoes around it
Were simply delicious; the gravy was fine;
The pies and the puddings were great, and I found it
A source of much pleasure to sample the wine.
I tasted the dainties; the cakes were the best;
The custards the best that my mother could make.
But better than these, and I loved it the dearest,
Was Thanksgiving turkey, the brownest of fowl.
The Thanksgiving turkey, the fat, juicy turkey,
The well seasoned turkey that kept me awake.

But now that the days of my boyhood have ended
My youthful career is a thing of the past;
My feet far away from the farmhouse have wandered
And landed me here in the city at last.
I'm seated today at a boarding house table,
Where hash is the principal food that we eat.
And memories of boyhood seem more like a fable
Than something that once was reality sweet.
Oh, I yearn for the turkey, one slice of the turkey,
The Thanksgiving turkey that nothing can replace.
Lawrence Archer Hott in Lippincott's Magazine For November.

Non-taxable in Ohio 6 per cent. preferred stock $500,000
Non-taxable in Ohio common stock 1,000,000
$1,500,000

The road runs from Columbus interurban loop to Hebron, Licking county, and from there to Newark, with branch from Hebron to Buckeye Lake. Total 41 miles.

It is built in the most substantial manner and operated by experienced men in every department. Tucker, Anthony & Co., who control and operate the road, are among the largest owners of traction lines in the country. They also own the Newark and Granville line, the Newark and Zanesville line, all of which will be operated from the fine power house of this company at Hebron. This power house is equipped with the very latest and best machinery and uses natural gas for fuel at a cost of only 8 cents per thousand feet. Power current can be produced here at probably less cost than any other plant in Ohio.

The road is now earning about $400 per day and the amount of travel is limited only by the capacity of the cars.

Half hourly service will be commenced as soon as all switches are completed. The service is now hourly. It is expected that next summer the travel to Buckeye Lake will bring the earnings up to $1,000 per day. It is understood that the first dividend on the preferred stock, amounting to 1 1/2 per cent. will be paid January 1, 1903.

We believe that the first year's operations will show a handsome surplus earned on the common stock.

We are offering a limited amount of the underwriting, embracing both preferred and common stock on very favorable terms for a few days only. Sales for cash or on margin of $15 per share.

AMUSEMENTS.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch of September 22, 1902, makes the following statement in reference to "The Madman" which will be seen tomorrow night in Newark:

"The Madman" is a comedy pure and simple and has a consistent story that is light and airy, but strong enough to interest anyone.

Lincoln J. Carter usually presents the heaviest kind of melodrama, but in this case he has changed his policy entirely and given a real funny play, telling of a few of the troubles and adventures in a humorous way of a barn-storming theatrical company. Miss Zoe Matthews, a particularly bright and entertaining soubrette, has the principal role, and is aided by Charles Plunkett, for the past three seasons engaged with Mrs. Fiske's companies and considered by many as the cleverest character comedian on the American stage; Miss Florence Willis, the Herald Square Quartette, and several others well known to the public. The specialties are all good, particularly the singing of ocean songs by Miss Matthews which were encored several times. The comedy has many excellent features and is, indeed, amusing from beginning to end.

"The Madman" will come to the Auditorium tomorrow night.

NEXT MONDAY NIGHT.

Sullivan, Harris and Woods' great scenic production of Theo. Kremer's powerful play, "The Fatal Wedding," is the extraordinary attraction announced for Monday, November 10 at the Auditorium.

A one night engagement here will scarcely be sufficient to accommodate the crowds who will flock to see it, but that is all the time that could be provided for it, owing to previous engagements elsewhere. The sale of seats is now in progress, and from all indications the house will be sold out long before the arrival of the company. The remarkable financial and popular success of the play last season, is a familiar story, and the company that is to be seen here is fitted with all the elaboration that characterized the production of the play last year. It carries some two car loads of scenery and beside the speaking cast, a number of people whose duties are to help in giving realism to the scenes requiring masses of characters on the stage. Besides these, some thirty supernumeraries are employed in its presentation. Conspicuous among the characters is that of Jesse, "the little mother"—one of the most difficult and exacting roles ever portrayed by a child actress. The little lady who essays this role, is, however, credited with a brilliant performance and one of the greatest achievements ever made by a little one. The remainder of the cast is made up of artists who have been specially selected for their special fitness for the parts assigned them.

The National Museum at Belgrade has come into possession of a collection of 68,000 Roman copper coins recently unearthed near a Serbian village. The oldest of them were in the time of Caracalla.

MOSES NYE

Successful as a Newark Merchant is Also Succeeding in Evangelistic Work.

Cincinnati, Nov. 6, 1902.

To the Advocate:

While in business at Newark the Advocate was the paper I used as an advertising medium and I made a success of the clothing business. Since God opened my eyes and showed me that Jesus is the Messiah I am just as much interested in the salvation of souls as I was in the selling of clothing.

No doubt some of my friends think I am foolish in going about preaching the gospel and proving to Jews and Gentiles that they must be born again or they cannot enter into the kingdom of God, but as I did all I could to make my business career a success, I am now doing all that I can for Christ. I succeeded in business as all my Newark friends know, and I am pleased to say that I am succeeding in the work that is now before me. The following appeared in the Cincinnati Journal and Messenger this week:

"Mr. Moses Nye spoke to a very large congregation at the Newport Ky. church on Sabbath evening, telling his experience of the 'grace of God which bringeth salvation.' Pastor Thompson and his people were greatly edified. Mr. Nye is proving a great accession to the mission carried on by Rev. S. Ragowsky. He addressed the German church one evening last week and Pastor Licht says that they hope to have him with them again. He can speak in either English or German. 'Mr. Moses Nye, of whom some things have been said in the Journal and Messenger in time past, was present and made a very favorable impression. He is now helping Rev. S. Ragowsky in his mission on Central avenue. Both Mr. and Mrs. Nye are earnest and constant in their efforts for the salvation of souls, especially of Jews. They believe in right living as well as in true faith.'

An Essay on Rain.

"In a general way I approve of rains," said the grumpy person when he reached home after a dreaching. "They are a fine thing when they come decently and in good order"—as he placed his umbrella where it would drip on the parlor carpet—"but I want to go on record right now—removing his soggy new hat and saturated coat—as declaring I am opposed to these rains that begin on the day before yesterday and keep coming"—gazing at his eight dollar trousers, which resembled dishrags. "It wouldn't be so bad," he resumed as he took his shoes off and let the water run out, "if it rained straight down, but when it rains zigzag and up and crosswise and catenars it's time to protest. A dog gasted day like this has no right to be on the calendar"—and so on until he got to bed.—Exchange.

AN OLD FAVORITE

THE OLD ARM-CHAIR

By Eliza Cook

ELIZA COOK, English poetess, was born at London about 1818 and died near London in 1894. She wrote for various English journals and advocated mental culture in "Eliza Cook's Journal." Among the best known of her poems are "The Old Farm Gate," "Old Songs," "Home in the Heart" and "The Old Arm-Chair."

I LOVE it, I love it! and who shall dare
To chide me for loving that old arm-chair?
I've treasured it long as a sainted prize,
I've bedewed it with tears, I've embalmed it with sighs.
'Tis bound by a thousand bands to my heart;
Not a tie will break, not a link will start;
Would you know the spell?—a mother sat there!
And a sacred thing is that old arm-chair.

In childhood's hour I lingered near
That hallowed seat with listening ear;
And gentle words that mother would give
To fit me to die, and teach me to live.
She told me that shame would never betide,
With Truth for my creed, and God for my guide;
She taught me to hush my earliest prayer,
As I knelt beside that old arm-chair.

I sat, and watched her many a day,
When her eye grew dim, and her locks were gray;
And I almost worshipped her when she smiled,
And turned from her Bible to bless her child.
Years rolled on, but the last one sped—
My idol was shattered, my earth-star fled!
And I learned how much the heart can bear,
When I saw her die in her old arm-chair.

'Tis past, 'tis past! but I gaze on it now,
With quivering breath and throbbing brow;
'Twas there she nursed me, 'twas there she died,
And memory flows with lava tide.
Say it is folly, and deem me weak,
Whilst scalding drops start down my cheek;
But I love it, I love it, and cannot tear
My soul from a mother's old arm-chair.

BRAIN FOOD

Is of Little Benefit Unless it is Digested.

Nearly every one will admit that as a nation we eat too much meat and too little of vegetables and the grains.

For business men, office men and clerks, and in fact everyone engaged in sedentary or indoor occupations, grains, milk and vegetables are much more healthful.

Only men engaged in a severe outdoor manual labor can live on a heavy meat diet and continue in health. As a general rule, meat once a day is sufficient for all classes of men, women and children, and grains, fruit and vegetables should constitute the bulk of food eaten.

But many of the most nutritious foods are difficult of digestion and it is of no use to advise brain workers to eat largely of grains and vegetables where the digestion is too weak to assimilate them properly.

It is always best to get the best results from our food that some simple and harmless digestive should be taken after meals to assist the relaxed digestive organs, and several years' experience have proven Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to be a very safe, pleasant and effective digestive and remedy which may be taken daily with the best results.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can hardly be called a patent medicine, as they do not act on the bowels nor any particular organ but only on the food eaten. They supply what weak stomachs lack, pepsin diastase and by stimulating the gastric glands increase the natural secretion of hydrochloric acid.

People who make a daily practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal are sure to have perfect digestion which means perfect health.

There is no danger of forming an injurious habit as the tablets contain absolutely nothing but natural digestives: covaline, morphine and similar drugs have no place in a stomach medicine and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are certainly the best known and most popular of all stomach remedies. Ask your druggist for a fifty cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and after a week's use note the improvement in health, appetite and nervous energy.

TURNED HOSE

On Two Tramps Who Had Set Fire to the "Cooler" at Granville Thursday Night.

Granville, O., Nov. 7.—Granville, although noted for its quiet and peacefulness, occasionally has a little excitement to relieve the monotony of the place, and Thursday night was one of these occasions. During the day two hobo umbrella menders struck the town, and thoroughly canvassed it for work. They evidently did not meet with flattering success and in the evening, previous to their departure, became very ugly and insulting in their remarks. One of them was seen to abstract a bunch of celery from the stand in front of Wright Brothers, grocery and made off with it. Mr. Wright immediately notified the Constable of the actions of the two men, but before he arrived George Piper, the meat merchant also sent in a telephone message to the Constable informing him that the men were using very insulting language in front of his place of business to Mr. Fred Buxton, the jeweler. The constable quickly responded and found the men ensconced in the hallway of the Granville hotel building eating a lunch.

He gathered them both in and escorted them to the calaboose, where they were locked up to await the action of Mayor John M. Swartz, who was out of town.

Shortly after the men had been locked up a small boy informed the constable that the tramps had built a fire in the "cooler" and that there was danger that they would set the place on fire. The constable immediately proceeded to investigate and found that the men had set fire to the blankets that are used by prisoners confined in the place, and that the interior of the hallway was filled with smoke, while the men were dancing and yelling around the fire like wild Indians.

The fire department was quickly called out and soon had a stream of water from a line of hose playing on the interior of the prison. The fire was quickly extinguished and the prisoners thoroughly soaked with water. The firemen taking particular delight in shooting a two inch stream at the hobo who had used such insulting language to Mr. Buxton.

The tramps were accused of having set fire to the building, they having previous to their incarceration, made the threat that they would do so. They however denied that they had built the fire, but insisted that some students had thrown the fire into the place. The men were finally sent out of town, and it is safe to say that they will not again visit Granville for some time.

OTHER SPORTS.

FOOT BALL TOMORROW.

The East Newark Foot Ball Team will play the Second Denison team from Granville, tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock at the East Newark Ball Park. A good game may be expected, judging from the showing put up by the Newark boys against the Denison H. Soaps team last Saturday. Everybody come and bring your ady. Ladies free. Admission 25 cts. The Newark team will line up as follows:

Center, Evans; R. G., Labley; L. G., Iorn; R. T., Mullinex; L. T., Coan; T. E., Gore; L. E., Fisher; I. B., Martin; R. H. B., Graham; L. H. B., Montgomery; F. B., Martin R.

FOR STATE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Ohio State university football team is practicing hard for the game with Case next Saturday at Cleveland.

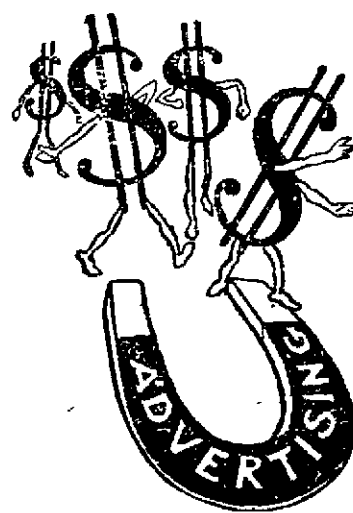

Which both teams regard as virtually disposing of the championship as far as they are concerned. Each has Ohio Wesleyan to reckon with, but the team that is defeated next Saturday, may be said to be out of the running.

Should Case win the championship game with O. W. U. will be played at Cleveland, while if Ohio State wins their game with Delaware at that place will decide the championship. Coach Hale has devoted much time to remedying the defects in Ohio State's play, and there is a general opinion that O. S. U. will win, among the players and students.

Hale has made a radical change in taking Lincoln out of the line and playing him at fullback, where he is using his 200 pounds to the best advantage possible.

MEDICS PLAY TODAY.

Ohio Medical university plays Muskingum at Neil Park today. Francis and Captain Sickles are still unable to get in the game.

The Problem of a Tired Mother.

The funny papers have told, time and again, how it makes a man feel to be shut up alone with the children even for a few hours.

It's no wonder that nerve troubles attack the mother for she has the children all the time. How can she help being nervous, especially while the little ones are making such constant drafts on her energy?

No woman can endure the strain of her housework and two or three little ones unless her digestive powers are of an unusual order. She can't manufacture force enough to stand the strain.

We can suggest one thing that will surely help her and it isn't a drug poison either. It is Vinol, made by a remarkable new process from that wonderful remedy, cod liver oil, a true tonic.

Money back if you don't find this true.

YOUNG'S FOREIGN TRIP

The General's Experiences at German Army Maneuvers.

FUTURE HEAD OF THE U. S. ARMY

Successor to Miles Describes the Value of the General Staff System in Emperor William's Army—How He Told His Famous Milwaukee Joke to the Kaiser.

There are no finer specimens of physical manhood in the American army than Generals Corbin and Young. Each is more than six feet and all that, but this is a story about the recent experiences abroad of General Young, whom General Corbin a few days ago announced was to succeed General Miles in the command of the army, says the Washington correspondent of the New York World.

General Young, who, together with Generals Corbin and Wood, attended the German army maneuvers and were entertained by King Edward of England, threw one leg over the other and took up a red covered memorandum book from his desk.

"I have some notes here," he said, "that I made in Germany. Perhaps I can elaborate on them."

Then he closed the book and never opened it again, but talked for an hour about the trip to Germany and to England and to France.

Germany was friendly through the emperor, and England was more so through the king. Each person in authority, according to the experiences of the three American generals, tried to show these representatives of this country's army that the only original, traditional friend of the United States was the sovereign he represented, and the sovereigns themselves were not far behind in this endeavor. General Young had nothing to say on this point, but his experiences spoke for themselves.

"You understand," said the general, "that even if I felt so disposed I could not say one word of comparison between our army and that of Germany. The secretary of war has forbidden that and has ordered us to keep our comment for the report we are to make. However, there is no restriction on us as regards our experiences, the people we met and what we think of them, and I may say that I talked with the Kaiser and King Edward enough to find out that great as their estate is they are essentially human beings and men in every sense of the word. Both are what we would call good fellows. They like congenial company, good stories, a good dinner and a good cigar. They are neither one of them so hedged in with the sense of their own importance that they cannot meet everybody on a common footing, and they gave me the impression of being bulky chaps whom it would be a pleasure to run across anywhere."

"We were in Germany a few days before we were officially there—that is to say, our invitation stated that we would be expected to be at a certain place at a certain time and that we would then become the guests of the emperor. We got into Berlin a few days ahead of time to look about."

"Our official visit was to begin on Monday. On Sunday we were invited to dinner with the emperor. We were to go to a formal dinner on Monday night, and we couldn't quite make out what this invitation meant. The dinner on Monday night was to be a big affair. Some of the young chaps thought that the dinner on Sunday night was to let us out for Monday night, but we couldn't conceive that, and anyhow if we had it wouldn't have made any difference, for such an invitation is a command. So we put on our uniforms and went. We found that the emperor had invited the English officers, Lord Roberts, Kelly-Kenny, Brodrick, the secretary of war, and Lord Lansdale, who is one of the emperor's best English friends, and had not invited any of the officers from the other countries. It was a German-English-American function exclusively."

"We were presented to the emperor, who received us cordially, but still little more than the usual polite greetings. Then the emperor came in with his ladies in waiting. We had been told to leave our hats and swords in the ante-room. That marked the dinner as informal, for if it had been formal we would have worn our swords and carried our hats. We went in to dinner. The table was laid like three sides of a square. The emperor sat at one side of the table on the closed end, with Lord Roberts on one side and Corbin on the other. The emperor sat across from him, and I was near by."

"That dinner was one of the pleasantest I ever attended. We talked constantly with the emperor across the table. The emperor wasn't quiet a minute. He asked everybody questions and argued and explained and proclaimed his opinions, and we fought him back and had a good time. Somebody noticed he wasn't eating anything and spoke to him about it."

"Oh," he said, "I had my dinner at 6 o'clock. I never eat anything at these affairs. I get my dinner every night at 6 and go to bed at 9:30 and get up at 6 in the morning. I am busy and have no time to eat at irregular hours. It interferes with my work."

"After the dinner was over we went out in the reception room with the ladies and chatted for a minute. Then the emperor and his ladies in waiting went away. The emperor bowed, and we all bowed, and they walked out into a corridor. Just as soon as they had disappeared the emperor made an all embracing gesture and said, 'Come on, boys; let's go and have a smoke!'

CARNEGIE'S BETE NOIRE

Steel King In Terror at the Mention of Death.

HE DREADS ALL REFERENCE TO IT

Former Secretary James H. Bridge Says the Aged Pittsburgh Millionaire Never Allows the Word to Be Uttered in His Presence—His Most Striking Idiosyncrasy.

"Few men would accept Andrew Carnegie's horror of death with all his millions."

In these words James H. Bridge, formerly secretary to Mr. Carnegie, describes what he asserts is one of the famous millionaire's most striking characteristics in his declining years, says the New York American.

"Mr. Carnegie's horror of death," says Mr. Bridge, "is literally unspeakable, for he never allows it mentioned by any of his own circle. If others speak of it, he quickly moves out of earshot. Just before his mother died he called a friend to his own sickbed and said: 'When mother goes, I don't want to be told about it. You attend to everything.' And to this day he does not know how or when she died, although he was within a dozen feet of her at the time."

"It was the same a few days before, when his brother Tom died. To break the news gently I told him that Tom was ill with pneumonia. 'Then he'll never get over it,' he replied and turned his face to the wall. 'There was no need to tell him anything more, as he never asked.'"

Many other idiosyncrasies of the steel king are revealed by Mr. Bridge, who was with him for many years. But perhaps the most striking of these is his vanity.

"Mr. Carnegie's vanity," says Mr. Bridge, "is his great weakness. It has been carefully nurtured and cultivated until it has grown into the most impressive thing about him. The love of himself, the fondness for his own name, the desire to see it in five thousand cities on five thousand imposing facades, and to think of it as thus conspicuous throughout all succeeding ages—this is the underlying motive of the Carnegie generosity."

"And it is barely possible that Carnegie himself would so admit it. At any rate, he never made a gift without provision for such public and perpetual recognition of his benevolence."

Mr. Bridge expresses the belief that many of Mr. Carnegie's views are directly traceable to his small stature. In height he is only 5 feet 4 inches.

This slight physique, by debarring him from rough sports of youth, has given a peculiar twist to many of his ideals.

He dreads pain and turns pale at the sight of a drop of blood. The many attributes especially glorified by the Scotch race he holds in contempt. With him muscular strength is brutal, physical courage a relic of barbarism and masculine beauty a sign of intellectual debility."

According to Mr. Bridge, the aged Pittsburgh millionaire is truly harassed by the responsibility attending the proper disposition of a fortune which is increasing at the rate of over 50 cents a second, $30 a minute, $1,500 an hour, $43,200 a day, $302,400 a week and $1,296,000 a month.

"His sole motive in life, according to Mr. Bridge, now appears to be the exaltation of his name and a postponement of the hour when death shall separate him from the millions which accumulate faster than he can distribute them among the charities that he affects."

"But he may live a good many years yet," Mr. Bridge adds. "Although he is now nearly seventy years old—his mother used to give his birth year as 1833, not 1837, as he himself does—his regular life and careful habits have kept him young, and he is still full of vigor."

"The common belief in the hygienic effect of association with young people, especially with a young wife, has been verified in his case."

Ultimate Thule of Pants. A London tailor says he has reached finality in the matter of trousers; that the trousers of today will be the trousers of a million years hence.

The world goes on upbuilding, with frequent shifts and change. What was a verdant valley is now a mountain range. And yet the mighty mountains by stress of food and gale.

May in the distant future become another vale. But here's where art and nature can see no further chance; we've reached the farthest limit, the pinnacle of pants.

The fig leaf and the rushes, the woven grass of grass. We've reached the proper caper, but also had to pass. The toga of the forum, the graves of brass and steel. Were long ago rejected, and there was no appeal.

And so we've climbed the ladder, and from the top we glance. And proudly tell our hearers, 'There'll be no change in pants.'

In art as well as letters there still is much to do; The chisel of the sculptor not yet has graven true. The history of music shows that the songs are sung.

Will be the sweetest ballads from inspiration wings. In ecstasy we caper, in proper pride we prance: At last one thing is finished—they can't improve our pants.

—W. D. Nesbit in Baltimore American.

GRIEVES OVER STRIKE'S END

Ill Wind of Others Has Blown Good to Coal Mine Mules.

Be not too sweeping in your declarations that no living thing has been an immediate beneficiary through the workings of the great coal strike, says the special correspondent of the Philadelphia Press at Scranton, Pa., writing under the date of Nov. 2. There is one class of living beings connected with the coal mining industry, and not the least important class either, that has profited a very great deal indeed.

It is true that the workmen, however they may or may not profit by the ultimate decision of the arbitration commission, must regard the time they were "out" as a time when they suffered. It is still more true that the operators must in any event look back at that period as one of serious financial loss, and it is, finally, truest of all that the shivering consumer will remember the last few weeks of the strike with fear and trembling.

But, however it may be with these divisions of society, there remains one division to which the strike has been a glorious and lazy vacation, a time for waxing fat, a time when food was plenty and work absolute zero. That class is the company mule. Never were the mules of the anthracite region in better condition than today. At all times they are taken care of in as good manner as falls to the lot of most mules, but at no time have they lived in luxury such as they have known since the declaration of the big strike last spring.

These beasts are stabled in the mines. They are sent to work underground at the very tenderest age and from that day to the day of their death they work, eat and sleep, live and move and have their being underground. For years on end they are strangers to the light of the sun. But when the present strike became evidently a final affair there was naturally no reason for retaining these mules in the mines. They were accordingly released and turned out to pasture in the open air of the real world. At first they were strangers to it; they did not feel exactly at home; they were a little afraid.

Then the inherited instincts asserted themselves, and today, when there are still some of them above ground, you can see them here and there, nibbling the autumn grass and finishing their first series of meals other than dry food, sleek, fat and eminently contented.

NEW FAD IN RINGS.

Fashionable Woman Displays One on the Outside of Her Glove.

At a recent performance at Mrs. Osborn's playhouse a woman prominent in the "smart set" made a startling effort to introduce a new "fad" in rings, says the New York Times. As she raised her opera glass to scan the house from her box it was seen (it could not help but be seen) that she wore on the little finger of her left hand a cluster ring of brilliant diamonds surrounding an enormous pearl.

The ring was one to excite attention in itself, but what made it a startling feature of the lady's appearance was the fact that it was worn outside the position in the inner circle of the "smart set" there is no question. She has influence, audacity and force. Though no longer in her first youth she is always perfectly groomed, and no debutante can boast more exquisite or more expensive toilet.

It has been regarded as "the limit" to wear rings over gloves. It is considered worse than wearing diamonds at the breakfast table. That it is infinitely more convenient to put them on over the glove than to put on a tight glove over them has nothing to do with the case, of course. None but a woman strongly entrenched in a social position could have dared to do it. The question is, "Will she set a fashion?"

A Way to Photograph on Canvas.

Artist Bechard, a pupil and friend of Cabanel, has discovered a method by which he can reproduce any subject by photography on painters' canvas, reducing to the minimum the difficult art of painting reproductions, says the Paris correspondent of the New York World.

No one has been able to do it hitherto because the canvas is coated with white lead and fatty substances. By using a photograph of the picture on canvas the necessity of spending weeks, perhaps months, in work on the original outline is obviated, as the shading is faithfully reproduced with the outline by the camera, and only the colors have to be filled in. The reproduction of a painting like, for example, "Le Poete" in the Luxembourg, could not be finished in less than four weeks by an artist of average talent. But by photographing the picture on canvas and afterward painting in the colors the whole can be completed in eight days and, it is claimed, in equally good style.

A New Public Forest for Germans.

Emperor William, carrying out his purpose of converting the Grunewald into a vast pleasure ground for the use of the inhabitants of Berlin, has approved plans for new roads, playgrounds, picnic grounds, glades and restaurants in the forest. One of the emperor's objects is to encourage outdoor athletics, says Forest Leaves.

The forest contains 11,500 acres. It is a royal hunting preserve, but the forest-rangers are now killing off the deer and wild boars there.

King Leopold Coming Here.

The Brussels correspondent of the London Times announces that the king of the Belgians has accepted an invitation from the executive committee of the St. Louis exposition to visit the exhibition in 1904.

OUR INDUSTRIAL STATE

Note of Warning Sounded by Frank A. Vanderlip.

IMPRESSIONS OF HIS TRIP ABROAD

Ex-Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Says Europeans Believe That the American Invasion of Foreign Markets Is Checked—A Critical Examination of Our Domestic Condition. He Says, Might Show Developments Not Entirely Satisfactory.

Frank A. Vanderlip, ex-assistant secretary of the treasury, in the course of his remarks at the chamber of commerce banquet the other night in Washington, N. C., said:

"I am just back from another European trip and have again met many of the most distinguished European statesmen and financiers. The change that a year has made in their point of view is extremely interesting. I found in every capital I visited and in the mind of almost every keen observer of international affairs with whom I conversed a belief that we have for the present marked the high water point of our overflow of exports into the European industrial field, and there is today a feeling of grave conservatism and anxious interest in our future."

"They note that the rapid increase of our exports came to a halt two years ago. They note that our imports in the last two years have been rapidly rising, the record for the fiscal year just closed being more than $900,000,000 against only a little over $600,000,000 in 1898."

"They note, too, that in spite of that tremendous balance of trade which government reports showed in our favor a balance running up to an average of almost $600,000,000 a year, we do not seem to have any unusual command upon international credits, but we are, as a matter of fact, a considerable debtor in the world's exchanges, and, that now, in the midst of extraordinarily bountiful harvests and at the season when a movement of gold in this direction might normally be expected, we are concerned lest a high rate of sterling shall lead to gold exports."

"If we are honest with ourselves, we must admit that the edge is off our invasion of foreign markets. Our totals are still colossal, but the rate of increase which they were making has been checked and decreases have been recorded. Our exports of manufactures for the fiscal year just closed are $20,000,000 less than the point they reached two years ago. Our total exports of domestic merchandise fell off more than $100,000,000 in the year. Instead of decreasing imports we have made some large increases in our purchases of foreign goods, and the total for this fiscal year stands more than $300,000,000 above 1898."

"If we chose to examine critically our domestic condition, we might find there, too, developments not in every respect satisfactory. We have had in less than four years an increase in the total bank deposits of the country of over $4,000,000,000, accompanied by no increase in the specie and legal tender holdings of those banks."

"What has brought about this remarkable development of bank credit? The answer must at once come to the mind of any observer of finance that the principal reason for the expansion of deposits and the accompanying expansion of loans is to be found in the great movement which has been the significant feature in financial affairs of the last half dozen years, the movement to aggregate industrial establishments into single great corporate units, and to convert the evidence of ownership into corporate securities which have entered actively into the stream of financial operations."

"It must be admitted, I believe, that we have been converting too great an amount of liquid capital into fixed forms of investment. What is the cure? The cure is, of course, to reduce the expenditures of that character so that they will come within the line of safety. What is the line of safety? It is, it seems to me, something well within the total income from such investments."

"Is it not well to ask, what of the future? If a $100,000,000 importation of gold can serve as a basis for an expansion of so many millions of deposits and loans, what will an exportation of $100,000,000 mean? Will not the answer lead us to ponder on the probable effect of future gold movements?"

"Let us examine recent records. For the first nine months of this year our imports increased over last year $56,000,000, and it must be remembered that the total imports for last year were $300,000,000 more than in 1898. On the other side of the book, our exports for the nine months of this year decreased $109,000,000, so that the record for the nine months shows a net balance on $164,000,000 more unfavorable than the corresponding nine months of the previous year. In the same time we have lost $5,000,000 of gold. For the twelve months ending with September our favorable trade balance was $420,000,000, against $611,000,000 for the previous twelve months, a decrease of $221,000,000."

"I wish by no means to present an alarming view of the outlook. What I do wish to do is merely to sound a conservative note of warning. I believe there are in the situation tendencies in which are elements of possible danger. On the other hand, I by no means forget the long list of favorable conditions upon the opposite side of the account."

"A judicious recognition of the restricting conditions now visible in our financial situation may save us from disaster and humiliation later on—a humiliation from which recovery will be slow and painful."

ANCESTRY OF THE TURKEY

How the Thanksgiving Bird Was Discovered by the Spaniards.

It is not generally known perhaps that the turkey has been an inhabitant of the earth for about four centuries, but such is the case. Before he was discovered by man he made his home in the new world—South America, Mexico, United States and Canada—where he enjoyed a natural free life and was never kept awake nights by the thoughts of Thanksgiving and other holidays on which he is so popular. Those were his halcyon days, and he gloried in all his wildness until the Spaniards found him in Mexico in the sixteenth century. The dons, seeing what excellent Thanksgiving dinners he made, took him back with them to the old country, where he has served sumptuous repasts ever since.

The Spaniards, however, were not to have a monopoly on Mr. Turkey. While hunting around on our shores for a good spot to plant a colony and for trophies of the glorious new world to take back to England John Cabot heard the sturdy note call, "Turk, Turk," and forthwith made up a large part of his ship's cargo of turkeys. Thus he was named and not from any relation to the Ottoman empire.

Our turkey became entirely domesticated once in England and now shows two very fine breeds, the Norfolk and the Cambridgeshire. The former, the taller of the two, is almost entirely black. The Cambridgeshire, while generally bronze in hue, is sometimes slightly variegated. Occasionally the cocks grow topknots.

The turkey availed himself of all his opportunities for travel and self-culture. After obtaining this start in life he journeyed to all points of the compass and today can be found throughout the civilized portions of three continents—North and South America and Europe. Thus he is known over half the world.

All this has made a great change in his mode of living. He no longer roosts on high treetops nor seeks his food at wide range through the forest, but occupies a cleverly constructed coop and studies character and gossip in the chicken yard. If he is neither of the Norfolk nor Cambridgeshire family, he dresses in dull brown or fawn.

While Mr. Turkey's life may appear easy and luxurious, it is also one of great sacrifice. He gave up his picturesque ways and independence to profit mankind and gives up his life every day for their use.

ACTIONS OF DOUKHOBORS.

Pilgrims Lay In Snow All Night While Seeking the Lord.

The Doukhobors' camp was a scene of activity at a little after 7 the other morning, says a Winnipeg special to the New York World. The shivering pilgrims were blue with cold. Hundreds had lain on the ground all night, and heavy snow had fallen. Others slept in bundles of straw.

At Foxwarren the Doukhobors stayed for nearly half an hour, singing chants and talking to the few villagers who came out in the cold. They told the resident minister that he did not love the Lord or he would march to find him with them, saying it more in sorrow than in anger.

The Rev. C. Jeffrey of the Church of England mission returned to Winnipeg recently from a trip north, during which he endeavored to reason with the Doukhobors and urge them to return to their farms, but his words had no effect. They insisted that they were seeking the Lord and following his command by forsaking all that they had.

TORPEDO MANEUVER WORK.

Fleet Will Actively Participate in the Caribbean Problems.

Active torpedo work is to be one of the features of the exercises of the naval maneuvers in the Caribbean sea, says the Washington Post. Three sets of live torpedoes have been shipped to Culebra along with a large quantity of ammunition, and they will be discharged at an imaginary enemy either by the armor clads equipped with torpedo tubes or by the torpedo boats.

The latter, under the command of Lieutenant Commander Lloyd H. Chandler, are working toward Culebra. They left Port Royal recently for Key West and from the latter point will cross to Cuba, thence to Haiti and Porto Rico, and will reach Culebra in ample time to take part in the search problem, which begins on Dec. 5.

Rear Admiral Higginson, who will have charge of the defense in this problem, will have about thirty-five vessels under his command. The armor clads he will keep in a central position, but the remainder he will distribute at various points to report the appearance of the "enemy" or will send out in search of him.

Reform in Naval Nomenclature.

Lord Selborne, first lord of the British admiralty, has decided to abandon the old practice of going to heathen mythology for names of new warships, and in future all vessels will be named after the countries, counties and towns, says the New York Commercial Advertiser.

The names of the two 18,000 ton battleships immediately to be laid down have just been announced. They are New Zealand and Hibernia. There are already among battleships a Dominion, a Commonwealth, a London and an Edinburgh, and it is said that the two new armored cruisers will be named Natal and Newfoundland. The idea of the admiralty, like our own navy department, is to interest other countries, and towns in the ships that bear their names and by this way to encourage recruiting for the navy. Already sixteen cruisers have been called after various countries.

ROYAL MOOSE HUNTING

Stories of the Trophies Secured This Season.

EVEN WOMEN AND BOYS GET GAME

Pluck and Skill of Two Lady Hunters Who Killed a Nine Hundred Pound Moose in Maine—Great Sport Enjoyed in New Brunswick—Large Antlers Secured.

The moose hunting season in Maine has been a great success thus far, more of that game having been killed in the first two weeks of the open time, beginning Oct. 15, than is generally brought down in a month, and the sport has developed many interesting features, including the killing of big bulls by women and small boys, says a special dispatch from Bangor, Me., under the date of Oct. 28, to the New York Tribune. Master E. C. A. Becker, Jr., of Worcester, Mass., is said to be the youngest moose killer on record in Maine, and his trophy is a good one. Master Becker recently spent a week with his father, Dr. E. C. A. Becker, and Charles L. Miller of New York at Louis Ketchum's camps on Nahmakanta lake, and while there killed an 800 pound moose, with antlers spreading forty-seven and one-half inches. The boy, who is only nine years old and not large for his age, also killed two deer, being held in the arms of the guide, George Ferris, so that he could see to shoot one of them.

An interesting story of the pluck and skill of two women moose hunters comes from Eustis, in the Dead River region, from which a party has just returned laden down with game. The party consisted of Forest R. Thompson of Rondout, N. Y.; Sumner L. Patten of Lakewood, N. J.; Henry E. Steele of Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Clement of Brownville, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Sherman and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Locke of Union, Me.

The other morning the men of the party went out in one direction to look for moose, while Mrs. Sherman and Mrs. Locke started up the dry bed of a stream in quest of game. When the men returned, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the women had not reached camp, and at 3 o'clock, with only one hour of daylight remaining, the guide became nervous and started out in search of them, followed by their husbands. Just at dark, after miles of tramping in the woods and the firing of numerous signal volleys, the guide came upon the two women, seated on a log, while at their feet lay the carcass of a 900 pound moose, bearing a magnificent set of antlers. The women were not lost, having followed closely the bed of the stream, but they could not carry the moose and determined not to leave their prize to any stray sportsman who might come along and claim it, or to bears, and so they stuck by it, hoping that help would come. The men rigged a carrier, and before bedtime the party and the big moose carcass were back in camp. Both women had taken a hand in the killing of the moose, each firing five shots, of which seven took effect. Had explosive bullets been used, the guide said, any one of the seven shots that struck the moose would have dropped him.

Great sport is reported by the Americans who have hunted in New Brunswick this season. On the Tobique river fifteen sportsmen got thirteen moose and two caribou in a week, and the guides say that fifty moose have been killed on the Tobique and Nepisiquit rivers by Americans thus far this year, one of the heads carrying antlers measuring sixty-two inches, another fifty-eight inches and several over fifty inches. Dr. Flagg and Mr. Mumford of Boston recently returned from the Miramichi, each with a moose and a caribou, while Frank B. Bennet of Boston got a moose, a caribou and a bear in the same country.

The officials of the crown land office at Fredericton, N. B., say that they cannot remember a season when so large a number of moose heads have been brought to that place as have been brought in thus far this year by visiting sportsmen nor a time when the heads were so large and handsome. Of thirty heads brought into Fredericton in the first four weeks of this season eighteen carried antlers spreading more than fifty inches. The guides say that there are twice as many moose in northern New Brunswick as there were ten years ago.

N. T. Depauw of New Albany, Ind., recently brought out a moose head from the southwest Miramichi that measures sixty-one and a half inches, and has sent it to New York to be mounted and placed on exhibition. F. W. Tolles of Naugatuck, Conn., killed a few days ago on Rocky brook, New Brunswick, a moose whose antlers spread sixty and three-fourths inches, with twenty points on the right side and fourteen on the left, the largest blade having a width of seventeen and a half inches in the web. C. D. Butler of Pittsfield, Mass., who accompanied Mr. Tolles, shot a moose with fifty-seven inch antlers. D. H. Mast of Milton, O., while hunting on the Miramichi shot and killed a moose at the distance of 350 yards, one shot from a 33 caliber Winchester rifle.

New Paint for the British Navy.

Within a short time all the ships of the British navy will be painted a uniform gray, which will take the place of the black and yellow of the home fleets and the white of the ships serving in tropical waters. After much experiment the selected color was obtained by the mixture of six pounds of white paint with eleven ounces of black.

BADGER

May Have a Hard Time to Secure Seat in Congress.

Columbus, Nov. 7.—Dewitt C. Badger, the Democratic congressman-elect, may have a rocky time securing his seat. There is no question about his having received a safe plurality of votes but numerous Republicans are insisting that the Ohio constitution be dropped in Badger's path to Washington as a barrier against him. These Republicans appealed to Attorney General Sheets for an opinion and today he gave out the opinion that all votes cast for Badger are void, and that Badger was compelled by the constitution to resign as common pleas judge before he could receive legal votes for congress.

SLUGGER JACK.

not speak to him.

The alibi rests on the question of a chess game. Mr. Tyler and Mason's brother fix the time he went out at 9:30, and they were playing chess at the time. "Whoever heard of two chess players," said one of the state officers, "keeping track of time."

The disturbing element in the case is the statement of the pawnbroker who bought Miss Morton's watch that it was pawned by a negro, who first offered it to him about 11 o'clock Saturday night. At that time according to the government, Mason was riding on a trolley car from Waverly. Joseph Nemser is the man who bought Miss Morton's watch. He says he offered $4 for it Saturday night, and that on Monday the negro accepted his figure. Later in the day Nemser's stock was examined again. This time Miss McPhee's watch was found.

The state police are not taking the negro theory seriously. Admitting they say, that the watch of Miss Morton was pawned by a negro that does not prove the murderer a negro. The murderer may have thrown the watch away or he might have given it to the negro.

Chief Wade himself says the evidence in his possession clearly proves a white man to be the guilty person. Sheriff Fairbairns at the House of Correction in East Cambridge, was besieged by deputations of volunteer detectives, who craved an opportunity to identify the prisoner Mason as the perpetrator of murderous assaults in or about Boston.

The prisoner's two brothers and his attorney, Mr. Ware, were in consultation with him for an hour during the forenoon. No other visitors were admitted during the day. The suspect has not donned the prison garb, as erroneously stated by a morning contemporary. He is still dressed in the dark colored suit which he wore at the time of his arrest. He did not bring a change of clothing, but in this, as in all other arrangements, he has conducted himself as one expecting an early release. Not even has any arrangement been made for having his meals specially prepared and sent in from outside, though, according to the prison regulations, this is permitted in the case of prisoners who are held merely on suspicion. The young man has submitted to the regular prison fare.

stand and denied Adams' statement. Her husband did likewise, saying he had never seen Cornish before. Stephenson on cross examination said his wife told him about poison package at the time the case first appeared in the papers four years ago but he did not believe much of her story. The court here adjourned to Monday.

IT'S A GUSHER

The Hunter gas well owned by the Knox county company is the giant of the Licking-Knox county field. The packer gave way when the valve was shut Wednesday night, but the work of taking the tubing out to repair the packer is comparatively easy as the gas would almost bring the iron pipes out by its own strength. The gas will be piped to Mt. Vernon. It's a gusher.

German farms occupy nearly 1,000,000 acres in Central America, on which over 200,000 coffee trees are planted.

DIFFICULTIES

Only Delayed the Wedding of Young Couple, Who Are Married in Crawford County.

Bucyrus, O., Nov. 7.—After a strenuous courtship love has triumphed and Miss Stella Orr and Mr. Bird Bartram of this county are one.

Months ago the wedding of these young people was arranged and the date set. Just as Miss Orr had completed her wardrobe and was about to leave Shelby, where she was staying, for Gallion, where the wedding was to take place, a case of smallpox developed in the house where she was living and the place was quarantined. Not daunted, Miss Orr packed her outfit and eluded the health officers of Shelby. She went to Gallion and was to have been married next day, but was taken sick with smallpox.

She was threatened with arrest for breaking quarantine and the case became notorious, the state taking a hand in the matter. As she was too ill to move she was not arrested. Wednesday a license was issued and Thursday night the young people were married.

Dr. White Returns.

Dr. L. W. White, who has been at Titusville, Pa., and other points in Ohio and Pennsylvania for a month, has returned home and will hold services at the A. M. E. church Sunday. Dr. White has been returned to the Newark church for another year. While at Titusville he was accorded a place on the program at the opening of the Women's Frinedly Institute and school of Domestic Science. He delivered a splendid address on "The Power of Endowment" and introduced the faculty of Domestic Science.

Booker T. Washington was present and took part on the program which was listened to by a large audience.

According to an official report there were between January 1, 1901, and March 31, 1902, 1,844 strikes in Italy, involving 438,000 men. Two-thirds of these strikes, organized by the Socialists, resulted favorably to the men.

AUTUMN.

(Martha Wintermute.)

The waning year in saddest tint is dressed,
The woodland and the vale is song bereft;
The warbling gleaners of the field have left
A breathless quietude, a peaceful rest.
The day is perfect in its solitude,
I hear no moan of wind or sigh of tree,
No converse or companions trip for me
Upon my lonely musings to intrude.
The memory of gone years, the calling blight
Of Autumn, and the slowly sinking sun,
Remind me that its course is almost run,
And the sweet day is gliding into night.
Homeward my steps I bend—no name so dear
Is left to mortals—Homeward, hope of all.
We wait to hear the angels' voices call;
We wait to meet the loved, for heaven is near.
